Professor Ernst B. Haas, Professor of International Relations at Berkeley in California makes the keynote speech of the McGill Conference on World Affairs last night. Prof. Haas spoke on Regional Government in the New Europe.

Haas at MCWA:

Supranationalism is victory of economics over politics

by CARLO MILLER
Senior Staff Writer

The New Europe, characterized by the system of "supranationality, or the system of regional government developed by the six nations of the European Economic Community" formed the topic for the keynote MCWA address by Professor Ernst B. Haas in Moyse Hall last night.

Dr. Haas, Professor of International Relations at the University of California at Berkeley, told the delegates to the seventh McGill Conference on World Affairs that the regional system of government developed in Europe since 1945 is "the future of that part of history which has also been aptly described as the end of ideology."

Victory over politics

"The advent of supra-national government symbolizes the victory of economics over politics," he said. Supranationality, "a unique style of making international decisions" is replacing the older ideologies based on the idea of the sovereign Nation-State in the New Europe.

The supranational system is neither a federal system nor a system of inter-governmental cooperation, although statesmen, among them General de Gaulle, have mistakenly considered it so," he told the audience.

"The context of supranational decisions is economic, social, and technical," said Professor Haas.

The decisions are, for the most part, made by high-ranking civil servants of the governments involved, who are concerned with the technical problems to be solved rather than the political.

But just because the system excludes political and military issues, he pointed out, does not mean it has no influence in the political realm. "The supranational style stresses the indirect penetration of the political by way of the economic," he said, referring to the tendency of social and economic decisions to "spill over" into political affairs.

Nation-state

The pre-modern idea of the sovereign nation-state has in recent years been gradually giving way to supranationality in the New Europe. But some of the recent actions of de Gaulle have come close to stopping the process, he stated.

"General de Gaulle does not play the game according to these rules," the rules of supranationality. France's veto of British entry to the Six in January stopped the movement towards closer union of Europe.

De Gaulle's policy is based on the idea of a sovereign nation state, rather than an European community of interest. When France has accepted any decisions of the regional government, it is only because it serves the national interest rather than the international.

There is an increasing trend to de-politicization in the New Europe, to the removal of ideology from politics, he said. "Statistics tend to replace ideologies and dogma". Considerations of economics and social welfare are having a greater influence on politics.

Citizens of the New Europe are more concerned with welfare measures than with political considerations. The future of Europe is determined, said Professor Haas, "in the sense that the supremacy of welfare-dominated policies is assured. If supranational institutions already charged with further penetrating this field are firmly anchored in this supremacy they will survive and flourish".

No word from Wales

At press time no word had been received from our correspondent following the debating team of Gordon Echenberg and Richard Currie on their tour of the British Isles. We hope to be able to print his report on their meet last night at the University of Cardiff in Wales along with his regular story on their debate at Oxford this evening, in tomorrow's issue.

Second MCWA session:

Brzezinski will speak today

Professor Zbigniew Brzezinski, a scholar of international politics and the Soviet Union will address the second plenary session of the McGill Conference on World Affairs tonight at 8:30 pm at Redpath Hall. The public is invited to attend.

In addition, the Right Honourable Earl of Selkirk will be guest of honour at today's luncheon. He has just returned from Southeast Asia where he served as High Commissioner of Singapore as well as acting as Commissioner-General for Southeast Asia until its independence.

He was a member of the Macmillan cabinet holding the position of First Lord of the Admiralty.

Brzezinski received his BA and MA in Political Science at McGill and a PhD in Political Science at Harvard in 1953 for work in Public Law and Government. He has been described as the only individual who can "intelligently analyse Russian political developments without being influenced by Western propaganda".

In tomorrow's address, the subject of which is "Regionalism in the Soviet Bloc", the Professor is expected to comment on the split between the Soviet Union and Red China.

He may also deal with other aspects of unification among members of the Communist Bloc.

The speaker is also an accomplished writer. He has written or contributed to more than five books on the Soviet Union including 'The Permanent Purge', which has been translated into five different languages; 'Politics in Soviet Totalitarianism'; 'Totalitarian Dictatorship and Autocracy', and 'Ideology and Power in Soviet Politics'.

Brzezinski is Director of the Research Institute on Communist Affairs and a faculty member of the Russian Institute of Columbia University.

Talk with Gérin-Lajoie satisfies delegation

From our own correspondent

QUEBEC — Youth Minister Paul Gérin-Lajoie reached agreement last night with student representatives as a number of special cases to be considered in the granting of provincial government bursaries.

He refused however to change the system of general norms by which bursaries are granted until next year's norms are decided on next January.

He also declined to set up an emergency fund for those students who must pay their fees immediately on the grounds of unfeasibility and the necessity of new legislation to establish the fund.

Delegates satisfied

McGill's delegates expressed satisfaction with the agreement. Robert Rabinovitch, Chairman of the Education Committee, said that "it was the most we could have expected considering the situation and the late date".

The special cases upon which the government has agreed are:

Students whose mother or father are dead or separated or whose revenue was below average last year due to sickness or other circumstances;

Students who must pay a pension to their family;

Students who could not find work this summer;

Students financially divorced from their parents;

Families where two or more children are in college.

A committee composed of student aid officers from the different universities, members of the government Student Aid Service, and a representative of the Student Consultative Committee on Student Aid will be set up to consider these special cases.

The exemptions are substantially those agreed to by the Student Consultative Committee and Hector Joyal, Director of the Student Aid Service last weekend.

The Minister also agreed to keep the Committee informed of the criteria by which the special cases will be studied.

Gérin-Lajoie said that "we shall see" if any extra funds would be made available to cover the special cases. It was understood that this would depend on the number of special requests.

Old Problem - New Solution

At its meeting Tuesday night the Students' Executive Council passed a resolution imposing a $10.00 fine on any student found drinking at a McGill sports event either in Molson Stadium or the McGill Winter Stadium. The resolution was passed after Council heard the report of a special committee set up to look into the serious and dangerous problem of drinking in the stadium, which outlined the university regulations concerning drinking (it is outlawed at present), as well as the views of the Scarlet Key and the Athletics Department.

We welcome this step by the SEC and we are convinced that both the Scarlet Key and future generations of students will be thankful for it. However, we realize that some students may regard this mandatory fine of $10.00 as unnecessary, extreme, and unenforceable.

The necessity for imposing such rigid controls has, happily, not yet become obvious. By this we mean that no student has had his head split open with a beer bottle, thrown by one of his intoxicated confrères. However, to wait for such an occurrence before taking action, would be to exhibit the worst possible kind of irresponsibility. The mandatory fine is designed to serve as preventative medicine as surely as any other inoculation ever was.

As for the weight of the fine which will be imposed, we contend that in relation to the possible damage which it is meant to forestall, it is only adequate, by no means excessive.

With regard to the enforceability of such a law, it is our belief that the guards outside the stadium, the Scarlet Key inside the stadium, and a student body which, when sober, has proven on many occasions that it can act maturely and responsibly, will combine to reduce the task to one of controlling and punishing an irresponsible minority.

Liquor at athletic events has been banned successfully at several other universities. Admittedly, it has often taken administrative action to do so. However, it is both right and necessary that, just as the students of McGill have almost unlimited freedom in managing their own extra-curricular affairs, they should undertake the more onerous task of policing themselves, and protecting the majority from a small, but potentially dangerous, minority.

We appeal to every student to support the action of the SEC and the measures which will be taken at the football game on Saturday by the Scarlet Key, in the performance of their duty. Both bodies are acting in order to protect all of us. We owe them our thanks and our loyalty.

An Interesting Exhibit

Sometimes, in strolling around the campus and the Union, one notices things which, while hardly world-shaking, are very pleasing to see.

Yesterday, in the Walter M. Stewart Room, the Chinese Students' Association produced a fascinating exhibit of oriental art, as well as a demonstration of the technique of writing with a brush. We hope many students took advantage of this unusual and educational opportunity. It would be nice to see more of this kind of exhibit in the future.

The Candleberry Tales

"Bargle!" Gallagher said, materializing in front of me. "Kafuffle! Grtzlk!"

I could tell by his tone of voice that he was mad at something, although it wasn't immediately obvious at what. "Calm down," I said. "What's the matter?"

"It's these young know-it-all upstarts," he answered, with a grimace. "Talking about 'Regionalism' and other fancy things at this conference they're having. What do they know about it, anyway?"

I declined to answer. Gallagher is always in a sour mood and it is useless to argue with him. I decided to change the topic of conversation.

"What have you got there in your hand?" I said as sweetly as possible.

Gallagher beamed and brandished the object aloft. "This, my smartaleck young friend is the solution to all the World's problems, so there!" I looked at it, but it didn't seem very impressive to me. All it was was a rather nondescript weed with the leaves trimmed off.

by

"What is it?" Maybe it had some magical powers, I thought.

"It's the stalk of a pea plant," Gallagher said. "It is guaranteed to prevent the outbreak of war. Just sit back and relax, and I'll tell you how it works."

"Picture the situation. World tension is at an unbearable peak. Both the U.S. and Russia live in daily fear that the other will start a nuclear war. The people are desperate for a solution to the crisis."

"Then I enter on the scene. I take this stalk, and mail it to the White House with the following note: 'Dear Mr. President: Please accept this stalk of a pea plant, which I picked personally in my garden. In the spring, when it has thawed, I will send you many more, and of the very finest quality. Signed: N. S. Khrushchev.'"

"Kennedy is puzzled, but in such troubled times he cannot doubt any act of friendship, however small. He instructs his secretary to answer Khrushchev, thanking him for the stalk and accepting the offer of more stalks in the spring."

"That afternoon, at the President's press conference, disguised as a reporter from the Peoria Plain Dealer, I get up and ask the following question:

"Mr. President: Is it true that you have accepted an offer of peace talks by Mr. Khrushchev, and, if so, when and where will these talks come about?"

"Kennedy answers: 'Yes, indeed, I uh- have accepted his offer. I believe these stalks will come in the spring, in Mr. Khrushchev's garden. He said in his letter that things would have thawed by then.'"

"A great sigh of relief goes up all over the world. It is too late to back down — by this one act both leaders are committed to peace talks in the spring in Mr. Khrushchev's garden. In view of world opinion, neither can afford to back down and explain the real situation. And so war is averted, and I triumph again."

"Come on now!" I snorted. "Do you really think anything so stupid and farfetched could possibly work?"

"What do you mean?" Gallagher's pride had been hurt. "I'll have you know that I used almost exactly the same stratagem with Neville Chamberlain in 1938. If it hadn't been for me, Hitler would never have led him down the garden path in Munich, and a war might easily have broken out. Hmph!"

I wondered where Gallagher had been these past twenty-five years. But I didn't get a chance to enlighten him on world events. With a gesture telling me that he had proved his case and that I knew where I could go, he had vanished into thin air.

Letters to the Editor

Gérin-Lajoie Defended

Dear Sir:

Due to a misunderstanding, it was incorrectly stated at the last meeting of the Liberal Club that Paul Gérin-Lajoie has refused an invitation to speak before the student body of McGill.

At that time such an invitation had not been sent, but we have since invited the Minister of Youth to address the students and we are awaiting his reply.

Sharon Sholberg,
President, Liberal Club

O Canada Wanted

Dear Sir:

This Saturday's football game promises to be one of great innovation. The SEC will enforce its new "no-boozie" law. The coaching staff of the Redmen will try out some new plays. I only hope that the band is seized by this spirit of innovation and finds room (somewhere between the Alma Mater and the Can-Can) to play O Canada!

Let's not have a recurrence of Ontarian God-Save-the-Queenism, as was perpetrated at the last home game.

Peter Evans, BA. I.

UBC bookstore margin tops Vancouver stores

VANCOUVER (CUP) — The University of British Columbia Bookstore gets a bigger rake-off than any downtown Vancouver store. And the bookstore could reduce its prices on texts by as much as 20 per cent and still make a profit, according to the student newspaper, The Ubysey.

This is what a downtown bookstore source told the paper this week. (He refused to be identified.) "Because the bookstore sells texts (any book used in the university curriculum) in volume quantities, it should be able to charge the text price," he said. "This is 20 per cent below the trade price."

High markup

Last week The Ubysey charged the bookstore with making a high profit of $30 — 40,000 from student sales and that the operating costs of $200,000 were out of line. They further charged that the markup on the books were between 25 and 35 per cent. The UBC administration has refused to comment on the newspaper's charges or to reveal the profit margin on book sales to students.

A hootenanny to be held at Birks' Hall, S.G.W.U. on Friday, November 1, beginning at 8:30 pm, is the final event of the fund-raising campaign.

The list of artists who will perform includes Ken Hamilton, the Mountaineers, Florence Brown, the W.I. Combo and the Fellowship Group. Admission for the event is $1.00. Tickets are currently on sale.

SEC elections set for November 20

One representative will also be elected from the faculty of Graduate Studies and Research, one from Music, Divinity, and Education, and one from Physical and Occupational Therapy, Graduate Nursing, and Social Work.

Nominations must be completed in accordance with Article Two of the Electoral By-Laws. Prospective candidates for undergraduate representatives must be in their penultimate year.

All resident graduate students are eligible to run as representatives of the faculty of Graduate Studies and Research.

Nominations are to be handed in to the Secretary-Treasurer by 4 pm on Friday, November 8. The SEC Office is ready to answer any suggestions concerning the nominations.

Poloists defeat YMHA; now hold second place

by JERRY GORN

The McGill Water Polo team took over sole possession of second place last night with an 11-9 victory over the Y.M.H.A.

The Y.M.H.A. squad got on the scoreboard early, but midway through the first quarter the Redmen took the lead and held on for the entire game. After only three and a half minutes had elapsed in the contest both McGill and the Y had each registered two tallies. Before the quarter had ended Klerks made it 3-2 for McGill on a goal assisted by Mills.

In the second quarter, with McGill shorthanded, Goldberg tallied for the Y, but only to have McGill's Glenn Ruitter come back after having been thrown out and dent the nets with a blistering bounce shot from half way. After Klerks had scored again for the redmen poloists, the Y player Kastner was ousted for the entire game, for attempting to use McGill's Chris Mills as a punching bag.

The second half opened with McGill leading 7-5 and before the third quarter had ended McGill added three more goals, while the Y managed to register two tallies. Both teams seemed extremely tired at the beginning of the fourth quarter and play slowed down considerably. The Y scored twice but with only fifteen seconds remaining Klerks tallied McGill's eleventh and final goal.

Soccer Redmen to meet U of M in deciding game

The McGill Redmen Soccer team will play the University of Montreal team tonight at Jarry Park in the final match of the best of three series between the two teams. McGill won the first game of the series 4-1 at Forbes Field but lost the second game 1-0 when only three first-string players were able to compete.

An exhibition match earlier in the year resulted in a 5-1 win for the Redmen. However, with a full team expected tonight the Red and White candy-stripers are favoured to win the trophy put up for competition this year by the Carabins.

Not dead

The Redmen, although beaten twice this year, are still in the running in both the Ottawa-St. Lawrence and the OQAA Leagues. In the former, they share the lead with RMC, each team having lost one goal in the two-game, total-goal series. The deciding game is scheduled for this Saturday on Forbes Field at 11 am.

Coach Bill Searles would like the following to meet at the gymnasium at 6 pm for tonight's game: MacFarlane, Spurling, Neil George, Brown, Berry, Clarke, Marin, Constantis, Sizgoric, Hardy, Elliot, Gzuts, Kafenzakis, Wood, Sawka, Nwafor and Fieldhouse.

Undoubtedly the star of the evening was Kees Klerks who scored six of McGill's goals. Commenting on Klerks' fine offensive and defensive performance Coach Shiller stated: "Klerks is one of the best additions we've had in many years." Glenn Ruitter also turned in a fine game, scoring twice and being thrown out twice. Commenting on the entire team's performance Shiller said "We played well".

McGill's record is now three wins and one loss and the Redmen poloists have now proven themselves to be one of the finest teams McGill has produced in recent years.

Fencers Flash Foils

On November 16th four women fencers from the McGill Fencing Club will fence in a tournament at the University of Syracuse.

The team will be led by Margaret Abela. Sheila Neysmith and Caroline Godard will also fence, as will Linda McKellar, the former captain of the Macdonald Fencing Club, who is studying at McGill this year.

Men wanted

The men's team, led by Aldo Bensadoun, will go to their first tournament this year at C.M.R. on November 9. Three of last year's team have graduated and replacements are needed. Newcomers with experience will be most welcome, especially since there is such an excellent chance of winning the Walters Trophy at the O.Q.A.A. tournament at the end of the season if the team keeps up its standards of skill and fitness.

Contrary to popular opinion fencing is primarily a sport, not an art. Ease and grace of movement are not sufficient. The strength of the team depends upon the excellent physical condition of the fencers.

RUGGER

All Rugger Club members, Intermediate and Senior, are required for tonight's practice as there is the possibility of playing two teams against Toronto this weekend.
